

Musgrove Mill State Historic Site

Musgrove Mill State Historic Site protects, preserves and interprets the Revolutionary War Battle of Musgrove's Mill, which took place on August 19, 1780. This brief but bloody contest pitted a small detachment of Patriot militia against a larger combined force of Loyalist militia and Provincial Regulars. Despite the odds, the Patriots scored a convincing victory, which was an important turning point in the war on the South Carolina Frontier. The site today contains a portion of the battlefield, as well as the colonial home and mill sites of Edward Musgrove, whose property was used as a temporary camp by the British which led to the battle that was fought near his home.
